'Don't Ask' Strikes Out in Senate

GOP blocks last-ditch move to repeal ban on openly gay troops

Washington

Republicans blocked a last-ditch effort in the Senate to lift the military's ban on openly gay troops on Thursday, dealing a major blow to gay rights groups and making it unlikely Congress could repeal "don't ask, don't tell" any time soon.

The 57-40 vote fell three votes short of the 60 needed to overcome procedural hurdles to lift the 17-year-old ban. Sen. Susan Collins of Maine was the lone Republican voting to advance the bill, and Sen. Joe Manchin of West Virginia was the only Democrat to vote against it.

Repeal advocates said the fight wasn't over, but Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid seemed to have little appetite to return to the subject with only a week left in the lame-duck session and other major legislation pending.

"The other side may feel passionately that our military should

"It Must Not Be the End"

President Obama is urging the Senate to try again to repeal the military's ban on openly gay service members before the end of the year. The president expressed disappointment with the Senate Republican's vote to block repeal of the policy. But he said in a statement that, in his words, "It must not be the end of our efforts." (AP)

It's Not Us, It's You: The public pins most of the blame for poor college graduation rates on students and gives a pass to colleges, government officials and others, a new Associated Press-Stanford University poll shows. sanction discrimination based on sexual orientation, but they are clearly in the minority," Reid, D-Nev., said of Republicans. "And they have run out of excuses."

Gay rights advocates were furious because the Senate vote failed largely because of a procedural disagreement. "Instead of doing what is right, the world's greatest deliberative body devolved into shameful school yard spats that put petty partisan politics above the needs of our women and men in uniform," said Joe Solmonese, president of the Human Rights Campaign.

The 1993 law bans gay troops from publicly acknowledging their sexual orientation.

FAA Missing Plane Data

Gap in registry info for 119K aircraft seen as security liability

New York

The Federal Aviation Administration's aircraft registry is missing key information on who owns one-third of the 357,000 private and commercial planes in the U.S. — a gap the agency fears could be exploited by terrorists and drug traffickers.

The records are in such disarray that the FAA says it is worried that criminals could buy planes without the government's knowledge, or use the registration numbers of other aircraft to evade new computer systems designed to track suspicious flights. It has ordered all aircraft owners to re-register their planes in an effort to clean up its files.

About 119,000 of the planes on the U.S. registry have "questionable registration" because of missing forms, invalid addresses, unreported sales or other paper-

The FAA ordered all aircraft owners to re-register their planes to update the registry.

Beyond Security

Next year, the FAA will begin canceling the registration certificates of all 357,000 aircraft and require owners to register anew. And the FAA says security isn't the only reason it needs an up-to-date registry: Regulators use it to contact owners about safety problems, states rely on it to charge sales tax, and some airports employ it to bill for landing fees. work problems, according to the FAA. In many cases, the FAA cannot say who owns a plane or even whether it is still flying or has been junked.

Already, there have been cases of drug traffickers using phony U.S. registration numbers.

"We have identified some potential risk areas, but I think we're trying to eliminate as much risk as possible through the re-registration process," said FAA spokeswoman Laura Brown. CHRIS HAWLEY (AP)

Tuition Furor Renews in Britain

Protests turn violent as measure passes to triple student fees

London

In Britain's worst political violence in years, thousands of furious student protesters rained sticks and rocks on riot police and vandalized government buildings after lawmakers approved a controversial hike in university tuition fees.

Protesters erupted in anger after legislators passed a plan to triple university fees to $14,000 a year.

Police condemned the "wanton vandalism." They said 38 protesters and 10 officers had been injured, while 15 people were arrested.

The violence overshadowed the tuition vote, a crucial test for the governing Conservative-Liberal Democrat coalition.

It was approved 323-302 in the House of Commons, a close vote given an 84-seat majority. The vote put Deputy Prime Minister Nick Clegg and his party in an awkward spot, as Liberal Democrats had signed a pre-election pledge to oppose a tuition hike.

Prime Minister David Cameron's government maintains the move is a painful necessity to deal with a record budget deficit and a sputtering economy.

Students have reacted with protests that have turned violent and paralyzed some campuses.

In response, the government modified its plan, but students have said the concessions are not enough. They say that under the proposal, debt will plague graduates and make a well-rounded education unattainable for many. (AP)

Haiti Announces a Recount in Contested Election

Port-au-Prince, Haiti

Haiti's electoral council will recount the vote in the country's disputed Nov. 28 elections, the council president said Thursday.

The decision follows rioting sparked by the announcement that government-backed candidate Jude Celestin and former first lady Mirlande Manigat were poised to enter a Jan. 16 runoff, while entertainer Michel "Sweet Micky" Martelly had apparently been narrowly eliminated.

Council president Gaillot Dorainvil said that tally sheets would be counted again in the presence of international observers and electoral officials, and likely the three main candidates, too.

There was no immediate reaction from the campaigns.

Nearly all 19 candidates have said fraud tainted the results. At least 10 candidates reiterated their call Thursday for the vote to be thrown out.

Martelly's supporters again paralyzed streets in the capital on Thursday, piling rubble into barricades and squaring off with police and U.N. peacekeepers. (AP)

Bow Wow: Russian leader Vladimir Putin has named his new dog Buffy, but there has been no sign yet that the Bulgarian shepherd has any vampire-slaying tricks. Russian news agencies reported Thursday that Putin said the dog "can't do a thing." But Buffy contradicted Putin, obediently sitting on his command. A 5-year-old boy won a competition to find a name for the dog, which Bulgarian Prime Minister Boyko Borissov gave to Putin last month. (AP)

Don't Feed the Rats

Inspired by our relatively rat-free rails, a New Yorker pushes to ban food

New Yorkers like to brag that everything about their city is better, especially their storied subway system, which runs all day and night, and takes riders anywhere they want to go.

So you'll be shocked to hear what Bill Perkins, an actual New York state senator, has to say: "Washington is our role model."

He's talking about rodent control, an issue he's devoted to much energy to that he's earned the nickname "The Rat Man." As a mass transit commuter himself, Perkins has seen the pests take over dozens of stations — including all 20 in his Harlem district. He's watched them crawling not just among the tracks, but also on platforms, trains and even inside the MetroCard vending machines.

To prove his point, Perkins' office conducted a "Have You Seen a Rat Today?" survey this summer. And, indeed, only 1 percent of the 5,000 respondents reported "never" spying the creatures. It probably hasn't helped matters that the Metropolitan Transit Authority recently laid off station cleaners, who provided the last line of defense in the subterranean system.

That's why Perkins is now on a crusade to ban food from the subway. "The rats do not buy or grow the food they're eating," he reasons. "If you feed 'em, you breed 'em."

And as anyone who's spent time

"You gonna eat that?"

Unlike some subway systems (which will remain nameless), you don't see rats the size of house cats roaming Metro. Why not? Because we're so strict about eating and drinking in the system. So help us keep the critters away. Please don't eat or drink on Metro.

COURTESY METRO

INFORMATION ANYTIME 202-637-2000 TTY 202-598-3780

New York could take its cue from Metro and ban food as a way to rid its rails of rats.

in Washington knows, a food ban can be an effective method for minimizing rat populations. As Perkins puts it, "D.C. is the nation's capital of rat-free commuter transportation."

Getting New York's MTA to agree to the prohibition won't be easy, considering one source of the system's income is station vendors who sell snacks. But Perkins insists that disgust among riders has reached such a high level that "without a doubt, it will happen."

If it does, New York will then have to face the enforcement problems D.C. has experienced. Even the fear of a fine hasn't been enough to keep many folks from nibbling, sipping and chewing during their daily commutes, which is why WMATA has constantly reminded riders with those "You gonna eat that?" rat ads (which poke fun at the Big Apple's woes) and a new series of posters depicting a diner (as in, you're not at one).

According to WMATA spokeswoman Cathy Asato, Metro Transit Police issued 54 citations, ranging from $10 to $50, to violators last year. Even that number is pretty remarkable, though, when you consider that most eaters and drinkers get only a reminder about the law. Typically, it's only people who keep on munching after the warning who get fined.

But maybe the specter of a New York subway food ban is just what Washingtonians need to follow the rules. After all, what's more satisfying than knowing we're superior? VICKY HALLETT (EXPRESS)

METRO PULSE

What security changes would you like to see on Metro?

"None. There are some dangers we have to live with. I guess a lot of people are getting fed up with [airport security], and at some point, we have to decide whether we're going to live our lives in fear."

Md. May Approve Gay Marriage

After shift in state legislature, cause has clearer path than ever

Annapolis, Md.

A majority of senators on a key committee in Maryland now favor legalizing same-sex marriage, making it increasingly likely that the state will join five others and the District in allowing such unions.

Membership changes on the panel, where same-sex marriage bills have previously died, are among a handful of shifts produced by last month's elections. Collectively, they appear to have tipped the balance on the most high-profile social issue the General Assembly will consider during its upcoming 90-day session.

Republican gains Nov. 2 in other state legislatures are expected to lead to more conservative social policies. But Democrats in Maryland bucked the trend, adding two seats to their majority in the Senate. Moreover, when the General Assembly convenes next month, as a liberal state, lawmakers have been slower to embrace same-sex unions than their colleagues in some other blue states, in part because of the strong opposition of the Catholic and black churches.

The legislation would remove a long-standing requirement in Maryland law that recognizes only marriages between a man and a woman.

Leaders of the House of Delegates, traditionally the more liberal chamber on social policy, said they have the votes to pass the measure. And Gov. Martin O'Malley has said he would sign such a bill, although he has previously supported the alternative of civil unions.

If a same-sex marriage bill is approved, advocates on both sides say they expect opponents to take advantage of a provision in Maryland that allows residents to petition recently passed laws to the ballot.

A successful signature drive would put the measure on hold, pending the results of a statewide referendum in November 2012.

Restaurant and bar owners in China have been summoned to local police stations and warned against allowing large gatherings on Friday. Some lawyers, writers and academics have been stopped at airports from boarding their flights; others have been forcibly taken to the countryside. Known activists are under house arrest. And on Thursday, several foreign media websites — including the BBC's and CNN's — were blocked.

Chinese police have said they were taking these actions to guard against a threat to national security. The threat, apparently, is 54-year-old bespectacled intellectual Liu Xiaobo, currently serving an 11-year prison sentence in China's northern Liaoning province for the crime of "inciting subversion of state power."

Liu was awarded the 2010 Nobel Peace Prize in October. Since neither Liu nor any of his family members are being allowed to leave China to attend Friday's ceremony in Oslo, the Nobel committee organizers said he will be represented by an empty chair.

It will be the first time the award will not be presented to the laureate since 1935, when imprisoned German pacifist Carl von Ossietzky was prevented by the Nazi regime from attending.

China's Communist government has lashed out ferociously since the award was announced, each day ratcheting up the rhetoric. Foreign embassies in Norway have been warned not to attend the Nobel ceremony or risk unspoken "consequences." China has already

In Beijing, China handed out its newly inaugurated Confucius Peace Prize — hastily created as a riposte to the Nobel — honoring former Taiwanese vice president Lien Chan. In a chaotic ceremony Thursday, Lien was absent, and his aides seemed not to know anything about it. Instead, a small, unnamed girl accepted it on his behalf. (AP) broken off trade talks with Norway. The foreign ministry spokeswoman, Jiang Yu, denounced the Nobel committee members as "clowns" and accused them of "orchestrating an anti-China farce."

Thursday's edition of the Global Times newspaper — the English-language tabloid published by the ruling Communist Party's main mouthpiece, People's Daily — continued the drumbeat of criticism, in a lead editorial that asked, "Is there a 'plot' among the Western countries against China?"

Nobel committee chairman Thorbjørn Jagland responded on Thursday that the awarding of the peace prize to Liu is based on universal human rights and is not an attempt to enforce "Western" values on China.

For all the fury directed outwardly, the fiercest reaction has been internal. Scores of activists, lawyers, professors — even the family members and aging parents of jailed dissidents — have been prohibited from leaving the country in recent days, or have been placed

Cause Célèbre

Liu Xiaobo, a literary critic and democracy activist, is serving an 11-year sentence on subversion charges brought after he co-authored a bold call for sweeping changes to Beijing's one-party communist political system. Previously almost unknown even within China, he has in recent weeks been transformed into a cause célèbre among global rights activists and a source of curiosity to young, Internet-savvy Chinese. Authorities in China have placed Liu's supporters, including his wife, Liu Xia, under house arrest to prevent anyone from picking up his prize. (AP) under house arrest, with their telephone and Internet lines cut. As the date of the Nobel ceremony drew closer, some were also told not to speak to reporters.

Mao Yushi, one of China's foremost economists, was prevented from boarding a flight last week to attend an academic conference in Singapore, even though he protested that he had no visa for Norway and no plans to attend the Nobel ceremony. He and other activists said the Chinese government's harsh crackdown has had one unintended, opposite effect — that of visibly underscoring the need for political reform that Liu was awarded the prize for championing.

"This way of doing things is stupid, and the government actually is losing face by doing it," Mao said. "I applaud Liu's award. This incident of not allowing me to go abroad just proves why it makes sense that Liu got the award." KEITH B. RICHBURG (THE WASHINGTON POST)

18 The number of countries, not including China, that are boycotting Friday's Nobel ceremony. Among those not attending are fellow communist regimes Cuba and Vietnam; Arab monarchies and authoritarian regimes Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Morocco and Tunisia; and China's allies Venezuela, Pakistan and Sudan; and neighboring Russia and Kazakhstan. "EVERYTHING IS NOT WORKING THE WAY WE WANT IT TO WORK."

— REDSKINS LINEBACKER LONDON FLETCHER

In an all-too-familiar scene, Redskins use December for tryouts

1 P.M.
Sunday | FOX

For casual fans, the playoff push is the best time of the pro football calendar. But Redskins fans are coming to know it as December tryouts.

Sure, Washington (5-7) still has a mathematical chance of winning the big prize, but so do people who buy lottery tickets.

So, what now?

With four games left, it's time to bust out the dreaded term that comes with the premature end to every football team's yearly aspirations: re-evaluation. And with the Albert Haynesworth saga solved for now in favor of coach Mike Shanahan, Redskins players know their boss won't be shy about making significant personnel decisions going forward.

"Some people are scared," said cornerback Carlos Rogers. "Not in a negative way, but [Shanahan] says it all the time: The teams that he's been on, Super Bowl teams and the experience that he's had in this league coaching, it's always everybody's together on one page. And if you're not, you're going to be out of here. That's his evaluation, especially for these last four games."

The Giants had plenty to celebrate Sunday; the Redskins didn't in a 31-7 blowout.

While there are several things the Redskins need to reassess after last week's embarrassing 31-7 loss to the Giants, tackling is likely highest on the list. Often described as a demonstration of will, tackling is something players learn as kids. But judging by the league-worst 5 yards per carry surrendered by the Redskins' defense this year, it seems Washington's players could use a refresher.

"The big thing that stood out was just the missed tackles [against the Giants]," Redskins defensive lineman Kedric Golston said.

On the other side of the ball, it's hard to imagine an area besides quarterback that isn't open for competition. There will certainly be a good deal of holdovers on next year's squad, but a youth movement in the backfield accompanied by the continued remaking of the offensive line means young players — like tailbacks Keiland Williams and James Davis — who didn't factor into Washington's plans at the beginning of the season will get to make their case for being on the 2011 roster.

Those young Redskins can start auditioning for next season this weekend when they host a surprising Tampa Bay squad. The Buccaneers (7-5) are what many NFL teams aspire to be: young, improving and gaining confidence. It's a significant contrast to the Redskins' current situation. ERIC BRANDNER

While the Redskins don't have much to play for the rest of the season, there is a chance a few will be in Hawaii for the Pro Bowl. (TWP)

► Despite missing the past three games with an Achilles' tendon injury, LaRon Landry still has a comfortable lead among the NFC's strong safeties in voting.

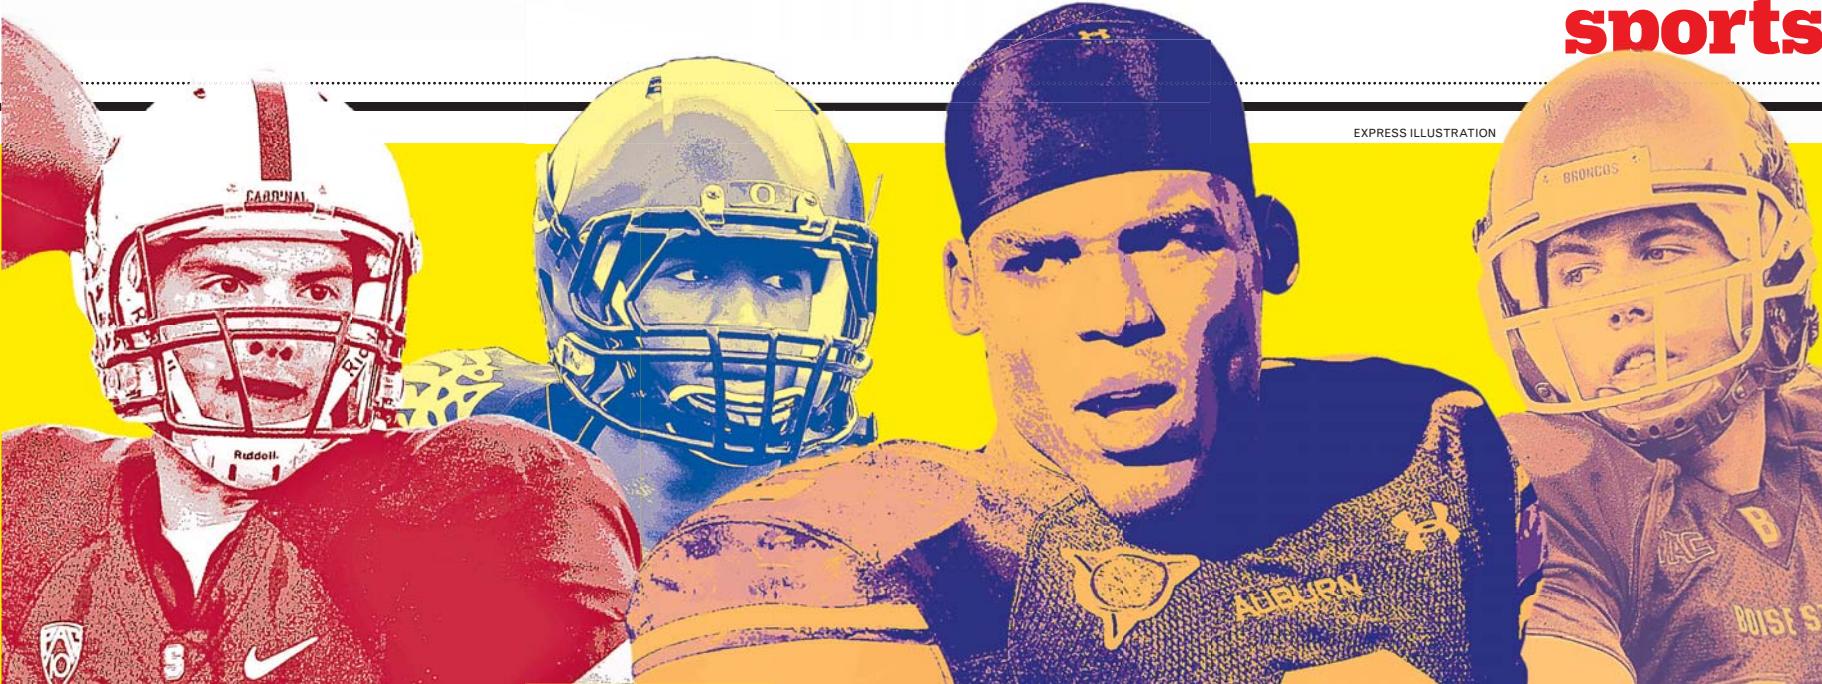

► At fullback, Mike Sellers is second only to New Orleans' Heath Evans.

► Chris Cooley is fourth among tight ends and has fewer than half the votes of the leader, Atlanta's Tony Gonzalez.

► Brian Orakpo has slipped from third to fourth among outside linebackers, well behind the top vote-getter, Green Bay's Clay Matthews.

► Lorenzo Alexander is fourth among special-teams players and has less than half the votes of front-runner Heath Farwell from Minnesota.

Newton's Law

Auburn QB stands above this year's other Heisman contenders

Sir Isaac Newton taught us that what goes up must come down. And so began a push to tear down the Heisman campaign of another Newton: Auburn's Cameron Newton. Eligibility issues, stemming from Newton's father's activities, dogged the quarterback late in the season and came on the heels of former USC star Reggie Bush's returning his Heisman for NCAA violations. But it appears Newton will prove his predecessor wrong, by rising, falling and then rising back to the top of the Heisman voting when a winner is announced Saturday. Take that, gravity. Here's our look at the four finalists at this weekend's ceremony. (EXPRESS/AP)

Cam Newton, QB, Auburn: Newton is widely regarded as a decisive Heisman favorite after a season when neither SEC defenses nor an NCAA investigation slowed him. He was the SEC's leading rusher with 1,409 yards — easily a league record for quarterbacks — and he also led the nation in pass efficiency, completing 67.1 percent of his passes for 2,589 yards. Newton threw 28 touchdowns and was intercepted just six times while also catching a TD pass as the Tigers finished undefeated, earning a spot in the BCS title game.

Kellen Moore, QB, Boise State: Moore wasn't much of a Heisman hopeful early in the season but quickly played his way into the picture while leading the Broncos to the cusp of a BCS bowl berth. The junior was second in the nation in passer efficiency, throwing for more than 3,500 yards with 33 TDs and five interceptions, but his chances took a hit with a loss to Nevada that knocked Boise State out of BCS contention.

Andrew Luck, QB, Stanford: Luck was second fiddle to Washington's Heisman hopeful Jake Locker to open the season but quickly established himself as the Pac-10's best quarterback. The 6-foot-4 junior won a lopsided battle over Locker and his Huskies early in the season and guided the fifth-ranked Cardinal to one of the best seasons in school history. A projected top NFL pick, Luck threw for more than 3,000 yards and a school-record 28 touchdowns with just seven interceptions while completing 70 percent of his passes for an 11-1 team that earned an Orange Bowl berth.

Watch the 2010 Heisman announcement live from Times Square Saturday at 8 p.m. on ESPN.

LaMichael James, RB, Oregon: James was the main cog in Oregon's nearly point-a-minute offense, forcing teams to key on him while the rest of his talented teammates ran all over the field. Oregon led the nation in scoring at nearly 50 points per game and was second in total yards, just a few tenths behind Oklahoma State at 537 yards per game. Even with the extra attention, James led the nation with 1,682 yards and 21 touchdowns.

He closed out the regular season by gaining 134 yards in Oregon's 37-20 win over rival Oregon State on Saturday that clinched the school's first trip to the national title game.

Terrapins Stick by Their Veterans

Terps Hoops

Gary Williams knows something about loyalty. He knows what it feels like to let your game slide a little bit and to hear the voices of the critics and naysayers rise with each perceived failure. It was just a couple years ago that those voices were calling for the coach to be fired, after two decades at College Park, and to take his national championship ring and move on.

Though his relationship with then-athletic director Debbie Yow was often contentious, she ignored the calls, and was rewarded earlier this year when the Terrapins won a share of the ACC regular season title. So, Williams knows what it means to stick by someone. And he did just that this week.

Having played their way to a 15-point deficit against Temple, four of Williams' five starters were pulled and replaced by bench players, nearly all of them newcomers to the program. And those reserves pulled the Terps within reach of victory.

Seniors Adrian Bowie, Dino Gregory and Cliff Tucker, and junior Sean Mosley combined to score just nine points in Sunday's loss.

Speculation centered on which of those players had forfeited his starting spot. Bowie and Tucker seemed in particular peril. The answer arrived Wednesday against UNC-Greensboro. No changes. "I really believe in them," Williams said. "They've been loyal, four-year players. That means a lot to me."

Bowie and Tucker rewarded Williams by combining for 29 points in an easy victory. And the coach won't give up on his veterans easily — not with Boston College, the first conference opponent, visiting on Sunday.

"They struggled a bit the last couple of games, but that doesn't mean they can't be outstanding players for us this year," Williams said. "It's very important that they play well because they have the most experience on the team." DEREK TURNER

Red Sox Move Spurs Yanks to Up Offer to Lee

Pro Baseball

Immediately after the Red Sox landed Carl Crawford, the Yankees boosted their already whopping offer to Cliff Lee. Their high-stakes rivalry is escalating, hundreds of millions of dollars by the hour.

The other teams in the majors? They can only marvel at Big Boys Gone Wild. "I've never played in those poker games," Arizona Diamondbacks general manager Kevin Towers said Thursday. "It's a different pool of players we focus on and look at. I hear about it and kind of move on."

Not everyone is out of the mix, though. The Texas Rangers, eager to re-sign Lee, went to pay him a visit in Arkansas. There was still no timetable for when the ace might make a decision on where to play. "He's a premier free agent," Yankees general manager Brian Cashman said. "He's worth waiting for." (AP)

Results leading to job losses are one thing, but the toll on coaches' health is quite another.

Earlier this year, Michigan State Mike D'Antoni suffered a heart attack and came back to coach two weeks later. And then there's Urban Meyer, who quit for a day last December, citing health concerns. After thinking it over, he felt better and coached this season before resigning again Wednesday.

It's not that his heart isn't in returning Florida to elite status after a down year; his heart can't take it.

Yet I bet Meyer will be back, just like D'Antoni rushed back. They feed off the pressure — even if it kills them.

CUT. Cut along the dotted lines shown on the opposite side — square first, then the flaps. Don't forget the short cut on two of the corners.

2

FOLD. With this side facing toward you, fold the flaps in along the edge of the octagon — the four center pieces first, then the two corners without cuts, then the last two corners.

2. How to Make Gravy

(Paul Kelly) "Daddy's in prison" isn't the cheeriest conceit, but "How to Make Gravy" speaks to anyone who'll be missing a family member this year — particularly if it's someone who always contributed something to the holiday table. Just change it to "How to Make Green Bean Casserole" or "How to Burn the Rolls" to make it fit your family.

3. No Christmas for Me

(Zee Avi) Melancholy songs have their place, but so do happy endings. This sweetly mellow, guitar-based piece reminds us that being home for real is better than only in your dreams.

4.

I Wish It Was Christmas Today

(Julian Casablancas) Trimming the tree to this song will immediately make you feel like you're in some sort of magical movie montage. Go ahead: Try to listen to it and not dance a little.

5. All That I Want

(The Weepies) Maybe you don't believe in flying reindeer or virgin births, but it's a shame if you didn't hope for a little Christmas magic, even if it's just the kind that makes people stop being jerks for a little bit. Simple gifts — and appreciating what you have — are the focus here.

6. Little Drummer Boy

(Pink Martini) Any song that makes you want to belly dance for baby Jesus is a refreshing change. This jazz-flavored rendition of the classic features rum-pa-pum-pums with Middle Eastern flair.

7.

Donde Esta Santa Claus?

(Guster) "Feliz Navidad" doesn't have a lock on the Latin beat. Guster expresses concern about the location of the red-suited one with a touch of mariachi and maracas.

1.

Christmas Wrapping

(The Waitresses) Finally, a song that admits Christmas can be exhausting. Splitting the difference neatly between Scrooge-like grousing and Tiny Tim-ish sweetness, the Waitresses find the fun amid the crazy.

9. Merry Christmas From the Family

(Robert Earl Keen) Maybe you celebrate Christmas with your nuclear kin and everyone's neatly paired off and gets along. Or maybe you're normal, in which case this alt-country tune will resonate more than any Norman Rockwell image.

Santa Claus Is Coming to Town

Another Lonely Christmas (Prince) Feeling blue at Christmas? Drink banana daiquiris until you're blind-drunk, suggests this song. Fairytale of New York (The Pogues, featuring Kirsty MacColl) A night in prison and heroin addiction feature heavily here. Last Christmas (cast of "Glee") Holiday breakups are the worst, especially when they're Auto-Tuned beyond all imagination. My Birthday's Near Christmas (And It Sucks) (Munkarast) Sagittarians and early Capricorns will especially feel this one. (Not on iTunes, but findable on YouTube.)

RAG & BONE

Marcus Wainwright, David Neville

RAG & BONE DESIGNERS, BRITISH EXPATS

In 2002, Marcus Wainwright and David Neville didn't set out to become designers. The British duo just wanted to make well-crafted clothing for their friends. But with four flagship stores and celeb disciples such as Brad Pitt and Charlize Theron, Rag & Bone, sold locally at Intermix (3222 M St. NW; 202-298-8080), has become one of the hippest brands around.

When did you two meet?

DAVID NEVILLE: Marcus and I are English. We went to a boarding school together at Wellington College. We met when we were 13 and ended up in New York together.

How did you learn to design clothes?

DN: We learned about clothing from visiting factories. We started off trying to make men's jeans in an old denim factory in Kentucky. That was the origin of Rag & Bone. We were working out of our homes until the middle of 2006. Now we have a fairly big organization, about 70 people in our studio in New York.

Why the name "Rag & Bone"?

DN: The name references that we're English. It references a point in time when men wore suits to work, when there was no ready-to-wear. That sort of English tailoring is a big part of our point of view.

What's the aesthetic of Rag & Bone?

MARCUS WAINWRIGHT: We combine classic, tailored silhouettes with more modern, downtown-cool style. The fact that we're British guys working and living in New York says it all.

Was it daunting to start your line with no fashion training?

DN: Not really. It's been very beneficial, actually. Someone from fashion school might have an idea of what they want something to look like but may not have an appreciation for how it's made. We come from the reverse angle. We learned from the people making the clothes. That philosophy in our brand is very important. We make over 60 percent of the clothes domestically.

"The economy is a catalyst. The recession makes people think more about where they spend money."

Why do you think Americans are craving domestic production and heritage lines now?

DN: The economy is an interesting catalyst. The recession makes people think more about where they spend their money. There's a certain amount of patriotism, too. The founding philosophy of our company became all the more relevant in harder economic times.

What's your favorite piece in the current collection?

MW: My favorite piece right now is the shearling bomber jacket we did in three colors. It's a classic piece that looks great over a dress, to give it some edge.

What styles should women wear this holiday season?

MW: A great cropped sweater from our knit collection. It's an easy way to add interest to your look.

WHO DOESN'T LOVE CHRISTMAS TRADITIONS? It's the only time of year when parents sit little Hank and Emma on strangers' laps in malls and build houses that resemble the residences of the cannibalistic witches from German folktales. But chances are the little ones never catch on to the season's weirdness, so picking up a Gingerhaus Ultimate cookie manse kit ($35, Surlatable.com) will bring smiles to those sugar-stuffed faces but won't induce the same sorts of night terrors that re-reading 'Hansel and Gretel' might.

Dear Manolo

ANSWERS FROM THE SHOE BLOGGER

I would like to get a pair of rain shoes/boots. I live in Florida, with frequent trips to New York City and the Lake Region in Italy, so they need to be stylish. I do a lot of walking, so comfort is important, but second to style. — KLEE

Manolo says, the Manolo's friend is regularly traveling to the New York

City and the Italian Lake Region, home of the Lake Como? If she had also said that she spent time in the Hollywood, the Manolo would have thought that she was dating George Clooney.

But then, if she WERE dating the George Clooney, the Manolo's friend would not be needing the rain boots, because no matter where she was, it would be sunny. Sadly, there is only one George Clooney, and it is unlikely that you will be "hooking up" with him anytime soon, given that you are probably not the statuesque, 24-year-old ex-bartender/lingerie model/club hostess/aspiring actress with the dubious background. (And the Manolo apologizes to you, if you are.)

And because George Clooney is not your real boyfriend, only your secret, pretend boyfriend, you WILL be needing the rain boots because it is probably raining hard where you are.

Here is the Interlaken from Hunter ($195, Zappos.com), the rain boot that will help you forget about George Clooney and move on with your new secret boyfriend, Christian Bale.

Firth Fascination

When you write critically about movies — or TV, music or any of the arts — it's important to try to not be starstruck, as sighing dreamily doesn't lend itself to cogent thought. Which is why interviewing Colin Firth in anticipation of "The King's Speech," opening next Friday, posed a problem. Because I love him.

When I e-mailed my sister to tell her, her advice was "Shave your legs! Wear clean panties!" For a phone interview, I didn't think that was necessary.

I spent a week pretending it was just any other interview. I prepped my questions, did my research. Tested my recorder. Shaved my legs, just in case. The recorder worked like a dream, which is good, since my hands were shaking so profoundly for the first three minutes I couldn't take notes.

The interview (which will run next week) turned out very well, if I do say so myself. But when I hung up, the cold-as-ice journalist fled the building and morphed into a squeeful fangirl.

It's one thing to be smart about movies; it's another to let yourself get so jaded that you lose any sort of visceral reaction. This interview reminded me that there are still things to be giddy about when it comes to writing about film. It reconciled two parts of me: the part that did a good interview. And the part that printed out Colin Firth's head shot and hung it on my office wall.

En Route To Elegance

German director Florian Henckel von Donnersmarck ("The Lives of Others") wanted Angelina Jolie to look as regal as possible in "The Tourist," he told the New York Times. "We spent a few days just doing camera tests on different types of lipstick and white silk to be sure we could find the right combination and see how it would translate onto film," Von Donnersmarck told the Times. "Spending so much time on that was bizarre. But the way this film had to be told seemed to demand that — the material beauty was just so important." (EXPRESS)

The Tiresome 'Tourist'

Jolie and Depp pair up for a glamorous yet uncomfortable European adventure

Film Review

So much of life comes down to bad lighting. Too little, you go blind. Too much, and the flaws become as glaringly obvious as the cockroaches scurrying back under the wallpaper. That said, "The Tourist" isn't exactly the movie equivalent of a passport picture. But the high wattage of stars Johnny Depp and Angelina Jolie cast the film in a spotlight that would be unflattering for most films, least of all an insubstantial, tension-free thriller like this.

Shot in Paris, Venice and against a few backdrops that seem to have originated in Burbank, "The Tourist" is based on the 2005 French film "Anthony Zimmer," which is a bit odd, since unsuccessful movies don't usually spawn remakes.

If anyone had asked us, we would have advised Twentieth Century Fox not to put Depp and Jolie together. Both are, if nothing else, decidedly solo acts.

Less evocative of a Grace Kelly/Audrey Hepburn heroine than one made out of porcelain, Jolie portrays Elise Clifton-Ward, a woman of mystery who has brought her rather dubious wardrobe to Paris, where she hopes to reconnect with her lover, master criminal Alexander Pierce.

Pierce, it should be noted, communicates with Elise via handwritten messages on monogrammed stationery. One of those notes tells Elise to get on a train to Venice, sidle up to the first guy who vaguely resembles Alexander and thus confuse Scotland Yard and its desperate lead detective, Acheson (Paul Bettany). When Elise foists herself upon Frank Tupelo (Depp), a dopey junior college math teacher from Wisconsin, Acheson is confused, at first. Most bewildered, of course, is Frank, who suddenly finds himself in the middle of international intrigue.

If anyone had asked us, we would have advised Twentieth Century Fox not to put Depp and Jolie together. Both are, if nothing else, decidedly solo acts. Are these performers who one expects, or even wants, to see uncomfortably cuddling up to each other? No. It's too gruesome.

More gruesome, even, than what happens to Frank, who is shot at, arrested, accosted by Russians, dragged through the canals of Venice and threatened with death by the sinister Ivan Demidov (Steven Berkoff). In the interim, Frank falls in love with Elise. It takes about 47 seconds. We don't buy any of it.

Committed Relationship

A surprisingly sweet romance blossoms behind bars in 'I Love You Phillip Morris'

Film Review

In "I Love You Phillip Morris," Jim Carrey plays Steven Russell, a married, churchgoing good ol' boy who, after a near-fatal car accident, comes out of the closet as a gay man, turning to increasingly brazen scams to support his newly fabulous, and suddenly very expensive, lifestyle. After he's caught and sent to prison, he meets and falls in love — we're talking obsessive, head-over-heels love — with a fellow convict: the Phillip Morris of the title (Ewan McGregor).

Now hold on a second. Though the preceding paragraph sounds like a recipe for disaster, the movie is actually surprisingly sweet. Sure, it's over the top at times. When Carrey's smiling sociopath pays a fellow prisoner to beat the stuffing out of another con whose nocturnal screaming has been keeping his boyfriend awake, Phillip confronts Steven with the crime, then says, after pausing for comic effect, "That is the most romantic thing anyone has ever done for me."

I should point out that the film is based on actual events.

Yes, there is a real Phillip Morris (no relation to the tobacco company). There's also a real Steven Russell. He's currently serving a 144-year sentence in a Texas penitentiary. Most of that is for the four escapes he made to be with Phillip after his beloved was released and Steven was thrown in jail a second time.

"This really happened," reads an on-screen title, as the movie begins. And then, as if the filmmakers know that you're not going to buy it: "It really did." Truth, as they say, is stranger than fiction. MICHAEL O'SULLIVAN (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Dolls reside in Mark Hogancamp's model World War II European village.

Recovery In a Tiny, Imaginary Universe

Film Review

In the spring of 2000, Mark Hogancamp was brutally beaten outside a bar in Kingston, N.Y. After paramedics brought him back from certain death, he stayed in a coma for several days. When he emerged from the hospital more than a month later, he did so as a changed man, with little memory of his life before the attack.

In "Marwencol," filmmaker Jeff Malmberg chronicles how Hogancamp embarked on his own brand of therapy: creating an imaginary World War II European village called Marwencol, a 1/6 scale model made from miniatures and populated by Barbie dolls dressed in period costume.

Happily, Malmberg doesn't use his camera to gawk. Rather, he introduces the audience to Hogancamp and his eccentricities with unfailing sensitivity, etching a fine, delicately nuanced portrait of an artist.

The film is about many things — the mysteries of the brain and the creative spirit, the passions and motives of one idiosyncratic individual. But at its heart, it's about the communities we forge — real and imagined — to save our own lives.

All Good Things (R)

► Director: Andrew Jarecki

► Stars: Ryan Gosling, Kirsten Dunst, Frank Langella, Lily Rabe

► In a Nutshell: A drama based on a notorious case of an unsolved murder in New York.

► For Fans Of: "Before the Devil Knows You're Dead," "Capturing the Friedmans," "Catfish"

Jarecki knows his way around depravity and dysfunction, as "Capturing the Friedmans" made chillingly clear, and he elicits assured performances from Gosling and Dunst as characters who, for different reasons, are swept up in forces beyond their control. But as absorbing and detailed as "All Good Things" is, it never manages to levitate beyond tawdry movie-of-the-week voyeurism.

ANN HORNADAY (THE WASHINGTON POST)

David to return to the family business — in this case, collecting rent from sleazy tenants in a pre-gentrified Times Square.

"All Good Things" takes its plot from the notorious case of Robert Durst, who when his wife, Kathie, disappeared in 1982, came under suspicion of murdering her. Jarecki, who directed the gripping 2003 documentary "Capturing the Friedmans" and makes his feature debut here, clearly thinks Durst dunnit. And he makes a strong case that he also offed a friend and killed a man in Texas to cover his tracks.

A voyeuristic drama revisits a murder scandal from 1982

Film Review

Ryan Gosling delivers yet another chameleon-like performance in "All Good Things," Andrew Jarecki's ripped-from-the-headlines docudrama.

Gosling plays David Marks, the troubled son of powerful Manhattan real estate mogul Sanford Marks (Frank Langella) who grabs at the chance to escape his stifling father when he meets a pretty, down-to-earth girl named Katie (Kirsten Dunst). WHAT DO YOU WANT TO DO TONIGHT? BY FRITZ HAHN, RHOMA ANDERSON AND DAVID MALITZ

► FRIDAY

Fact No. 1: No one did funk like James Brown. Fact No. 2: Scientists have shown that only really uncool people can keep their booty off the dance floor when a James Brown song is playing. Fact No. 3: Harry Hotter, Jerome Baker III, James Nasty and Johnny Blaze — all solid DJs — are hosting an ALL-JAMES BROWN DANCE PARTY at U Street Music Hall between 5 and 10 p.m. (free, 1115 U St. NW; 202-588-1880). You'll hear music by the Godfather himself, spin-off groups and even hip-hop songs that sampled James Brown songs.

U Street Music Hall's Red Friday remains one of the city's best nightlife bargains. Named in tribute to the beloved, shuttered underground house music spot, the weekly event carries on the tradition of pretense-free dance music in the District's most exciting new club, and if you show up before 11 p.m., there's no cover. The talent the club brings in is always top-notch, and Friday is no different with THE JUAN MACLEAN hitting the decks ($10 after 11 p.m.).

► SATURDAY

NERD NITE is back at the Red Palace (1212 H St. NE; 202-399-3201, Dc.nerdnite.com) this month, and the topics are, as usual, all over the map. Head to the bar on a Saturday night and come out knowing more about weird things that happen after brain injuries (and how they've furthered scientific research), hear a marine biologist talk about how invasive species destroy ecosystems and, perhaps most interesting of all, learn about voodoo from a woman who worked as a Peace Corps volunteer in Togo and went on to earn her master's degree in public health by writing about the use of voodoo as alternative medicine. In between the half-hour presentations, SGT DUN-BAR AND THE HOBO BANNED perform. Doors open at 6:30 p.m.; nerding out begins at 7. Because most previous Nerd Nite events have sold out, we recommend purchasing tickets in advance.

Last year, this column got all excited about Slalom, an all-'80s dance party with a vintage skiwear dress code inspired by Wham's iconic holiday-in-Switzerland video for "Last Christmas." The party was everything we thought it would be, complete with an airing of "Do They Know It's Christmas?" and plenty of folks wearing gaudy '80s sweaters. Get ready for round two — well, SLALOM II: SKI BUNNY BOOGALOO at Dahlak (1771 U St. NW; 202-332-2110). It's free, it starts at 10 p.m., and it will be beyond rad.

Now Playing

127 HOURS (R, 90 minutes) "127 Hours" tells the true story of Aron Ralston, a climber who in 2003 became trapped in a slot canyon in Utah, his right arm pinned under a falling boulder. Most of the buzz about the movie, which stars James Franco, centers on the film's climax, when Ralston breaks and then amputates his own arm in order to escape certain death. Although Ralston's act of desperation is difficult to watch, viewers who avoid the film would be depriving themselves of an exhilarating experience. A.H.

BLACK SWAN (R, 103 minutes) As Nina Sayers, Natalie Portman delivers a bravura performance as a dancer with a New York dance company. The troupe's artistic director, Thomas Leroy (Vincent Cassel), taps her to star in a production of "Swan Lake." Her technical brilliance and tentative innocence make her perfect for the White Swan, but he's less sure she can pull off the ruthlessness and sensuality of her evil twin, the Black Swan. Perhaps Lily (Mila Kunis), an uninhibited, wild-eyed newcomer to the company, would be better suited to the role. A.H.

BURLESQUE (PG-13, 100 minutes) The first genuine showstopper in the musical "Burlesque" is a brassy, bawdy anthem called "Welcome to Burlesque," a valentine to pure camp made all the more exhilarating in that it marks Cher's return to the big screen after a too-long seven-year hiatus. Granted, this uneven but infectiously cheery movie is clearly designed around Cher's co-star, pop star Christina Aguilera, who in her feature film debut bumps and grinds and shimmies and belts her way to certain stardom. Aguilera plays young, ambitious singer-dancer Ali Rose, who teeters out of her Iowa trailer park to make it big in Hollywood. A.H.

FAIR GAME (PG-13, 104 minutes) Naomi Watts delivers an uncanny portrayal of former CIA operative Valerie Plame in "Fair Game," a political thriller that deftly navigates the knife edge between all-too-familiar recent history and more universal personal drama. For the most part, director Doug Liman steers clear of re-litigating the leak of Plame's name to the media during the Bush administration, instead focusing on how her being a spy, and then being outed, affected Plame's marriage to Joe Wilson (Sean Penn). After a dicey situation in Kuala Lumpur in which Plame persuades a local contact to become an informer, she returns home. Soon, Plame is reassigned to work on a task force studying whether Saddam Hussein possesses weapons of mass destruction in Iraq. M.O.

FASTER (R, 98 minutes) To appreciate this sun-baked revenge flick directed by George Tillman Jr., it helps to have a healthy respect for the movie's charismatic star. "Faster" works best as an ode to its main character, the Chevrolet Chevelle SS. Dwayne Johnson plays a not-unimpressive side of beef who, in his first days out of prison, is gunning for the backstabbing crooks who killed his brother. He's identified, fittingly, only as Driver. As an actor playing a surgeon might spend time observing a hospital, so Johnson appears to have modeled his performance on the bulls of Pamplona. We first see him pacing his cell, gleaming with sweat and snorting with rage as guards approach to lead him to freedom. DAN KOIS

THE GIRL WHO KICKED THE HORNET'S NEST (R, 148 minutes) The final, deeply satisfying conclusion to the trilogy of Swedish thrillers based on Stieg Larsson's best-selling novels follows Lisbeth

Salander (Noomi Rapace), the series' computer-hacker heroine and titular hornet's nest kicker, after movie No. 2 left her shot in three places and barely breathing. Lisbeth spends the entire first half of "Hornet's Nest" merely recuperating from her injuries and preparing to face a charge of attempted murder in the axing of her father (Georgi Staykov). Yes, he's a bad man. He has also been protected by a secret government cabal that resorts to threats and murder. M.O.

HARRY POTTER AND THE DEATHLY HALLOWS-PART 1 (PG-13, 145 minutes) The latest installment of the Harry Potter series can't be anything but unsatisfying — it's meant to leave filmgoers wanting more. It's half of a really good movie, full of the enchantment for which the Potter series has become so cherished. The evil Lord Voldemort (a noseless Ralph Fiennes), having taken over the Ministry of Magic, is bent on the destruction of Harry Potter (Daniel Radcliffe) and all the magical-Muggle miscegenation he represents. Meanwhile, Harry, along with his best friends, Hermione (Emma Watson) and Ron (Rupert Grint), has dropped out of Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry in order to find the "Horcruxes" that give Voldemort his power and immortality, and vanquish him forever. TINY FURNITURE (NR, 98 minutes) Art fans of a certain age will know the name Laurie Simmons, whose arresting, color-saturated close-ups of dollhouse-size domestic spaces were part of the 1980s New York photography scene. Now Simmons's daughter, Lena Dunham, has made a funny, affecting movie about growing up in the shadow of a formidable mom. If "Tiny Furniture" takes its inspiration from real life, Dunham adds a layer of fiction, casting herself, her mother and her sister not as themselves but as characters.

TODAY'S SPECIAL (NR, 99 minutes) There's nothing terribly special about this heartwarming if slight foodie comedy set mainly in the kitchen of a struggling Indian restaurant in Queens. Starring "Daily Show" correspondent Asif Mandvi, the film tells the story of a young, thoroughly assimilated Indian American named Samir, who quits his job as a sous chef in a fancy French Manhattan restaurant, takes over the family's dumpy Tandoori Palace on behalf of his old-fashioned, ailing father (Harish Patel), and in short order has whipped the place into such great culinary shape that the New York Times picks it as the city's best Indian restaurant. M.O.

UNSTOPPABLE (PG-13, 98 minutes) Director Tony Scott achieves something close to the action movie in its ideal form with "Unstoppable," which can be summed up thusly: Train out of control! Must stop train! A young, inexperienced railroad conductor named Will (Chris Pine) is on his first shift with veteran train operator Frank (Denzel Washington) on the same day that a train carrying tons of hazardous materials has been sent hurtling down its tracks without a conductor or functioning brakes. A coolheaded train executive named Connie (Rosario Dawson) helps Will and Frank face the impending crises. A.H.

THE WARRIOR'S WAY (R, 100 minutes) It's Cowboys versus Ninjas in this fan-tactical exercise in martial arts magical un-realism. But Korean swordsman Jang Dong-gun has a simmering charisma and a great hairstylist. And the movie is played for laughs, or at least was edited for laughs. Jang plays an assassin who has all but wiped out a rival clan. Then a cute baby stops him in his tracks, he saves it and then he flees to the Old West to hide. He ends up in Lode, "The Paris of the West" running a Chinese laundry. The fetching Lily, a girl with a tortured past, shows the new fellow, who she calls "Skinny," around Lode. But Skinny is anything but slow when he whips out his "weeping sword." ORLANDO SENTINEL

1 Rock 'n' Roll Star

Can you believe Patti Smith has a National Book Award?

She recently won it for her memoir, "Just Kids," and suddenly the National Book Award is punk rock and Patti Smith is speaking at the Smithsonian instead of rocking out on a grimy stage with a guitar. She'll talk about the book, and her friendship with Robert Mapplethorpe — especially apropos, considering the protests against the "Hide/Seek" exhibition now at the Portrait Gallery.

National Portrait Gallery, 8th and F St. NW; Sat., 2 p.m., free; 202-633-1000. (Gallery Place)

2 When High Art Meets Low Art

Comic books have been inchng their way into the mainstream for decades now, but they're still far enough to the side that an art exhibit about them will draw in the crowds. The opening reception for "Party Crashers," the Artisphere art show about comic book storytelling, takes place this weekend. Can't make it? The show itself runs through Feb. 13 — but you'll miss the free cookies.

Artisphere, 1101 Wilson Blvd., Arlington; Sat., 8 p.m.-11 p.m., free; 703-228-1850. (Rosslyn)

3 Shut Up and Deal

Billy Wilder made a bunch of the greatest movies of all time — "Sunset Blvd." and "Some Like It Hot" come to mind

— but his most watchable film is "The Apartment," shown left. It's a story about a 1960s office worker who allows company bosses to borrow his apartment so they'll have somewhere to party with their girlfriends. Of course, he's in love with the elevator girl, and, of course, she's in love with a jerkface executive — it's a predictable story, but it's so charming and the script is so well-written that the plot barely matters.

AFI Silver, 8633 Colesville Road, Silver Spring; through Dec. 16, $6-$10; 301-495-6720. (Silver Spring)

Worlds Collide, Impplode

SUN
8:00

Kate Gosselin is not a happy camper. On this week's edition of "Sarah Palin's Alaska," she and her brood make a much-anticipated guest appearance. But don't expect it to reveal her inner Daniel Boone. As things develop, the camping trip in the Alaskan wilds will be no day at the beach for Kate. But at least Palin's daughter Piper gets a kick out of hanging out with the stars of another TLC series. (AP)

Season Finale

They Killed It This Season

In the season 5 finale of "Dexter" (9 p.m. Sun. on Showtime) Dexter (Michael C. Hall, above) is forced to risk everything when he realizes that he and Lumen are being led into a trap. Debra lets her personal feelings overwhelm her professional instincts in the case of the Barrel Girls. Quinn finds himself in a situation where only Dexter can help in "Through a Glass, Darkly." Horoscope

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

Do what you can to free yourself up in mind and body. Give yourself the royal treatment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

You may be tempted to ignore certain conventions in order to test the waters and see where it will lead you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

Even something delicately concealed is likely to come to light before the day is out, so you'll want to avoid any falsehood.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) A member of the opposite sex may challenge your way of thinking. There's no need to discount his or her ideas out of hand.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may be more nervous about what you do know than about what you don't—and other things are likely to be topsy-turvy, too.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A leave-taking of sorts needn't be difficult; both parties must remember that this is only a temporary (though necessary) separation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You'll want to pass messages from one party to another in a manner that inspires trust in those for whom you are playing go-between.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Because you're not yet locked into anything, you should be able to consider a wider range of options than usual.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't let your head dictate what your heart should be feeling at this time, but your heart shouldn't call all the shots, either.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The line between what you would call a good time and a bad time is likely to become somewhat blurred toward day's end.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) A matter of taste may keep you from doing something that, coincidentally, isn't likely to be approved of by a loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You may have to convince yourself more than anyone else that what you have on the docket is really the best thing for all concerned.

Samurai Sudoku

DIFFICULT

Fill in each column, row and 3x3 box with the digits 1 through 9 without repeating any. The twist in Samurai Sudoku is that the digits that appear in the overlapping boxes must work for both puzzles. A piece of advice to get you started: Don't focus on completing one grid at a time. Keep the whole puzzle in mind as you go, because filling in a number in one grid could give you clues to another.

Florida Grants Stunt Pardon

Forty years after Jim Morrison was convicted of exposing himself at a wild Miami concert, Florida's Clemency Board pardoned the Doors' long-dead singer Thursday. Gov. Charlie Crist said there was enough doubt about what happened at the Dinner Key Auditorium to justify a pardon. (AP)

POETRY CORNER

The Love Song of J. 'Kermit' Franco

A poem representing the internal monologue of the greatest actor — recently featured on "Inside the Actors Studio" — who has ever lived in this or any other galaxy:

Let us go then, you and I
Let us do the unexpected, let us try To make the people so confused they just give up.
Let us host the Oscars, let us start a cooking blog
Let us adopt a frog
Let us name him Halle Berry and knit him a hat
What will they think of that?
My James Deanish looks should not serve as my one appeal
I want to make the people feel Off-balance every time I speak of a new project.
Let us adopt a yak
And then bring sexy back.

Two Annoying Tastes That Annoy More Together

Kate Gosselin and Sarah Palin had "zero chemistry" during the episode of Palin's TLC show in which the pair go camping, a source told Usweekly.com. "They didn't speak off camera. [Kate] said the food and accommodations were terrible, and it was the worst trip she'd ever been on." Her children, however, had a nice time. (EXPRESS)

Angelina also looks good in colorful headscarves. Chelsea must be jealous!

THE STOCK REASON ALL WOMEN BAD-TALK OTHER WOMEN!

She's Just Jealous!

Chelsea Handler expressed further negative feelings — though not in as profane a fashion as in her recent onstage rant — about Angelina Jolie in an interview conducted by Katie Couric for Glamour magazine. "Yeah, I'm not a fan," Handler said. "She just doesn't come off to me as a sincere woman. She seems like a woman that you'd really want to avoid." She also continued to praise Jennifer Aniston: "[She] makes me laugh. She's irreverent and hilarious, and she sends me really, really funny e-mails." (EXPRESS)
